DR. J. W. BOYD

Brother of the Late A. J. Boyd of This City Died at His Home in Cynthiana.

Dr. J. W. Boyd, dentist, died Tuesday night at his home in Cynthiana after an illness of several weeks.

He was a well known member of the Elks Lodge and Knights of Pythias.

He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Janie Oldham; his mother, Mrs. Emma Boyd; two sisters, Mrs. John McCollister, of New York City, and Mrs. Daisy Rucker of this city, and a brother, Tom Boyd, of California. The funeral service will be conducted at the residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. C. W. Elsey and the Rev. J. D. Armistead. The burial will take place at Battle Grove cemetery.

Mr. Boyd was a brother of the late Andrew J. Boyd of this city and attended his funeral here several weeks ago. He was a very popular man and was known throughout this district.

A GOLDEN CELEBRATION

Was That Which Was Held at the First Presbyterian Church Last Night in Honor of the New Members.

Never, perhaps, in the history of the old town was there a happier occasion than the reception last night in the First Presbyterian Church given in honor of the new members.

The beautifully decorated rooms told the guests that no pains had been spared to give them a royal welcome.

No formal reception line created an atmosphere of restraint but friend met friend with the warmth and cordiality of kindred long separated gladly returning to the old home.

At the door stood the genial pastor with his affable wife giving all who entered a greeting which made them glad they had come.

A most pleasant feature of the evening was the well rendered solos by our accommodating artists, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Dodds, accompanied by Miss Frances Barbour.

The warm weather made the ice which was served double palatable and refreshing.

After fifty years of separation it was a jubilee of joy and reunion.

AIR ACTIVITIES

Presage Another Great Offensive By the Huns on the Western Front.

London, May 23 — The Germans made another attempt to raid the British positions near Mesnil, but were repulsed, according to Field Marshal Haig's report tonight from British headquarters in France. The British carried out a raid on the German positions around Hebuterne with heavy casualties to the Germans.

The summarization of war news, based upon cablegrams received from all European battlefronts up to a late hour in the night, follows:

In the past year of the war, a period of extraordinary activity by the aerial squadrons of the contending armies in France has been considered as an indication that events were rapidly shaping themselves for an offensive by one side or the other. At the present moment, the most notable feature of the war situation is the remarkable work of airmen in various sectors where a German attack is looked for.

This activity has not been restricted to the actual battle area, but far back of each front there have been daring raids. The Rhine cities are frequently bombed, while Paris has again been in danger of a new German attack from the air.

American aviators have born a prominent part in this fighting. In the Lunenburg and Toul sectors, they have given a magnificent account of themselves, while further north and even in defense of London, they have demonstrated their fighting capacity.

The German plans for a resumption in France have been seriously hampered by the sudden blows of the allies here and there along the front. The Germans have been forced back at numerous points and positions which have been more easily defended have been taken by the allies. In their own sector, the Americans have given the enemy no rest. In the artillery battles, they have battered the Germans night and day while the infantry men have raided the German outpost positions and have proved themselves capable of out-witting and out-fighting the enemy. General Pershing's men have won several hot fights with the foe and have captured prisoners. A night gas attack was loosed on the Germans by the Americans near Toul, three waves of shells drenching a wooded position of the enemy with poisonous fumes.

The French, too, have been at work in various sectors, particularly in the Somme region. They have gained ground here and there at points where positions of tactical value were wrested from the Germans.

Further north the British front has been quiet, with tremendous bursts of artillery fire coming at intervals. The German official statement says that British attacks at various points were repulsed.

Reports from the headquarters of the French army are that there has been a re-distribution of German troops along the entire front. A German attack is expected soon, probably in the Somme region near Albert or on the Aisne river, where the German cannon have been thundering for several days, but so far the German general staff has not shown its hand. It is known that there are great masses of troops within striking distance of the front, and it is believed that when the enemy is ready to strike there will be only brief artillery fire as a prelude to the actual assault by the infantry. The last report from the French war office mentions heavy artillery fire in the Somme region and at Pleumont, near Nyon, where there was terrific fighting early in April.
